

WE'RE COMMITTED

LSU IS COMMITTED TO SUPPORTING SEXUAL VIOLENCE SURVIVORS BY PROVIDING ROBUST RESOURCES AND SERVICES TO MEET THEIR INDIVIDUAL NEEDS.

It's our shared responsibility to create and maintain a campus environment in which sexual violence against men and women is not tolerated and to intervene in a safe way when we see a risky situation unfolding. It could be something as simple as asking for the time to divert attention. Standing up to intervene not only helps foster safety, but sends the message that this kind of behavior is not acceptable in our community. Being an active bystander helps to shape our campus community into one where respect, consent and responsibility are valued. Talk to your friends, practice ways to intervene because it's everyone's responsibility.

Know what consent is and what it is not...

- Consent cannot be given by a person impaired by alcohol and/or other drugs.
- Consent can change at any time during an interaction.
- Consent must be without coercion or manipulation.
- Silence may not in and of itself constitute consent. Only yes means yes.
- Past consent of sexual activity does not imply future, on-going consent.
